Paramount (London) Presents

Paper Money of the World

Fixed price list No. 1

MARCH 1975

GUIDELINES

1. The Paramount paper currency list will be issued quarterly on a subscription basis of £2/$5 per annum. The annual subscription rate may be deducted from the first order sent in by any subscriber. Overseas subscribers will receive their list by air mail.

2. Unless previous arrangements have been made, we would appreciate receiving your remittance with your order. U.S. cheques will be acceptable when drawn at a U.S. bank. A ten days return privilege will apply on all purchases. We shall be pleased to forward photocopies of the obverse and reverse of any note in stock at a nominal charge of 5p/12c per copy.

3. The rate of conversion of the pound to the dollar has been taken at $2.40 to £1. This rate will remain applicable irrespective of market fluctuations until June 1975.

4. Your order will be processed with a minimum amount of delay but kindly allow up to two weeks postage delivery to areas outside of Europe.

Please add the following amounts in order to cover postage, packing and insurance of your order.

a. In the U.K: 50p

b. In Europe: 70p/$1

c. In the U.S.A: £1/$2.40

d. The rest of the world: £1/$2.40

Orders for which cheques from subscribers overseas are enclosed in payment, should also include an additional 25p/60c to allow for bank charges.

5. Wherever applicable catalogue references of one of the three following publications have been made:

a. George Sten 'Bank Notes of the World'

b. Albert Pick 'European Paper Money 2nd Edition'

c. Albert Pick 'Paper Money Catalogue of the Americas'

To this, one additional catalogue reference has been given where such reference is considered to be authorative on the subject matter. The full title of such a work is given at the end of the respective listing.

6. Paramount London has established a plan which is now fully operational for servicing 'wants' lists on an approval basis. Please do not hesitate to contact us with your requirements which may not be included in this list, bearing in mind that the list, of course, only represents a selection of the paper monies we have in stock.

We have also devised an investment plan over a minimum or longterm period for amounts ranging between £100/$240 as a minimum and £10,000/$24,000 as a maximum. We shall be pleased to send details of this plan on request.

7. We cordially invite you to submit any material you may wish to dispose of for our valuations and offer. We are constantly in the market for all rare paper money issues of the world. This may be individual items or whole collections. We shall be pleased, without obligations on your part, to advise you on valuations of your collection for purposes of insurance, for example.

8. For your convenience, enclosed with this list are the following pamphlets which we hope you will use without delay.

a. A subscription form to our price list and for the addition of your name to the mailing list of the other departments in Paramount London.

b. An order form.

c. Our self-addressed envelope, to which no postage stamp need be added if mailed in the U.K.

9. Where applicable the notes on this list are inclusive of VAT charges.

10. All offers in this catalogue are subject unsold.

Paramount London is proud to be able to present you with this first fixed price list on the popular and rare paper currencies of the world.

The numismatic fraternity at large and indeed the man in the street has become increasingly aware of this relatively new hobby which only a half decade ago was in its very infancy. We feel that we are able to contribute to the hobby as a whole and to the individual collector alike and that the contents of this price list, its layout no less than the offers in it, will be evidence of things to come in the paper money world and the important part that Paramount will play in them.

This first issue is being mailed to established and interested collectors and dealers alike and we regret that the cost of production involved in ensuring a high quality publication such as this, obliges us to request your subscription to future issues of our list. The Paramount paper currency list will be published quarterly and the annual subscription of £2/$5 will be refunded with the first order received valued £2 or over from any of the subscribers. We hope that you will guarantee receipt of our next three lists this year by filling in and forwarding to us with your remittance the enclosed subscription form.

Terms and conditions for trading with us are standard and are set out on the back of the front cover and we will endeavour to give just a little better service in order to satisfy your exact wants. Thus, we shall be pleased, at a minimum charge, to send you photocopies of notes which you may be interested in, and we shall ensure that such notes are reserved in your name for a reasonable period until we have further news from you. We shall be equally pleased to accept orders by telephone or telex and our approvals plan, which has been created in order to service your 'wants' list, is now fully operational.

We are here to serve you. Please do not hesitate to contact us with any enquiries which would, of course, impose no obligations whatsoever on your part.

We hope that you will find this catalogue of interest and value in itself, and that we shall hear from you and build a long lasting association.

Yours sincerely

SPECIAL FEATURE

THE PROVINCIAL BANKS OF ENGLAND

BY GEOFFREY GRANT *

The greatest of the British institutions ever, the Bank of England, was established in 1694 and immediately began to issue its own bank notes. It was not, however, until 1921 - over two and a half centuries later - that its paper money issues monopolised the whole country's monetary system.

In the middle of the 18th century the Bank of England notes did indeed circulate in most parts of Great Britain, but within a half century such circulation began to be confined to the London area and Lancashire.

The period between 1800 and 1921 effectively represents the rise and decline of the provincial banks and their note issues; this period provides the collector with one of the peculiar characteristics of the provincial bank notes, in that while all notes of the 18th century may be of interest and very rare, a collector's prized possession might yet be a provincial note dated in this century!

The heyday of provincial bank issues lies, therefore, between these dates. The origin of the Country banker owed nothing to the goldsmith - a strictly London Phenomenon - but grew naturally from the commercial needs of the provinces. Thus a Midlands manufacturer who sold his produce in London, had credit in the capital and it was natural that he would be prepared to offer others the facility of drawing bills on himself to settle London debts. Other bankers were in origin simply the "counting house" of a newly established industry; in course of time, certain members of the family would devote themselves to banking and later establish the bank as a full-time occupation. Records are filled with firms trading as "merchant and banker "or" grocer and banker". Only in 1800 do we meet banks being established, apparently, profitable commercial enterprises in their own right.

It is from this latter group that the typical provincial bank-note, dated between 1805 to 1830, is to be found. More often than not the issues are adorned with a bankruptcy rubber stamp on the reverse and details of dividends paid on the obverse. These notes were largely responsible for giving the whole series the reputation of being issues from impromptu banks, badly organised, under-capitalised and, apparently, invariably over-issued.

They were not, however, to be despised - in 1832 the lordly Bank of England was confessing that before 1825 it had not "the power of acting upon any fixed principle" regarding the ratio of gold to note-issues and deposits. Many country banks played their valuable role in financing the Industrial Revolution, and just as many were to fail for reasons outside their control - failure of the London agent or bill broker or of the bank's major industrial customer.

To the collector these notes, though not unusual, often provide the best opportunity for research into the Bank's origins; bearing in mind that no complete history for any period exists for types of provincial notes - the field is open for new discoveries.

The predominance of the type of issues of the period and the general weakness of the movement, stem from the mood of Parliament following the South Sea Bubble of 1720. The scandal left behind it a distaste for incorporation, particularly in banking, and the Bank of England's famed note-issuing monopoly prevented the formation of partnerships exceeding six individual subscribers. Nevertheless, until 1844 there were no note-issuing restrictions, even in London, on smaller partnerships. (Although London partnership banks are said to have stopped note issue by about 1770 because of the general utility of the Bank of England's note.)

The "provincial-note collector", therefore, need not really be that at all - if only he could obtain a London private note!

England's path towards a strcng branch banking system (as practised by Scotland for many years) began in 1826, with an Act allowing incorporated note-issuing banks outside London, and resulting in the Bank of England establishing country branches. A further Act in 1844 provided for the eventual extinction of all provincial issues. Many 1826 banks were not stronger than the partnership banks they sought to supplant, but the survivors of the early boom came to form the strong nucleus of our present system: taken together, the 1826 and 1844 Acts led the banks to realise that profitable banking was indeed possible without note-issues. Growth lay in the establishment of a branch system, by obtaining a seat at the London Clearing House and, most easily, by acquiring a London banker.

Thus, of the eleven remaining Clearing Banks in 1945, only three had originated in London, giving today's collector the added incentive of finding a note - perhaps a remote partnership issue - which is still redeemable at its face value.

These have a considerable added attraction and the days have gone by, when a collector could be sufficiently tempted by the small profit potential and dispose of a note merely because the face value exceeded the apparent curiosity worth of the issue.

Robert Owen was among the great English reformers of the industrial period. One of his contributions to the welfare of the workers was the "Exchange Bazaars" set up in 1833 and the issue of his "Labour Notes" which were valued in the hour denomination. Independant values determined the cost of raw materials and the labour that went into the manufacture of a certain product and thus labour hours were established for the equivalent amount of time.

The values issued were for 1, 2, 4, 10, 50, 80,and 100 hours.

Don Vicente B. Villa was a highly successful businessman, importing goods from Jamaica, when he founded his own bank on the 1st July, 1884. In Partnership with his sons and daughters, the bank intended to issue twenty thousand Colombian Pesos in different denominations, but most of these were never circulated in view of the almost simultaneous law prohibiting private bank note issues.

The bank was put under voluntary liquidation in 1904 after serving the community for almost exactly twenty years.

These very attractively printed bank note issues are exceedingly rare.

On the 5th August 1961 the new controversial President of the Cuban Republic took an unprecedented step in financial history by cancelling the validity of all the circulating currency in the country effective 3 days after. These steps were taken in order to put an end to the illegal flow of currencies into Cuba from refugees who had fled to the USA.

The new bank notes issued bore the signature of Ernesto Guevra, as President of the Central Bank. Very much in line with his familiar arrogance, the President of the Central Bank chose to sign the notes with merely a squiggle which was effectively his nick-name "Che". In view of the notes curiosity value, these notes quickly disappeared from circulation by souvenir hunters and collectors.

Early fiscal issues of the Central American Republics are always interesting items. The Dominican Republic issued Consolidated Debt Loan Certificates which were accepted as payment for 25 per cent of import and export duties in accordance with laws established in December 1874. The items consequently circulated as currency and were issued in different periods during 1876. They are hand signed and the embossed seal of the Republic adds to the esthetic appeal of these notes.

King Farouk was a legend in his own life time for achievments and intrigues far surpassing his royal titles. Of great interest to collectors throughout the world was the fact that he was an avid numismatist and the several sales of his collections caused an upsurge of interest. These facts must certainly increase the existant popularity of these notes of the National Bank of Egypt upon which his portrait appears. The high denomination notes, as always, are exceedingly rare in spite of the relatively modern date of issue - in this instance 1951.

The advent of the First World War led the British Government, through its fiscal arm - The Treasury - to take pre-emptive steps towards the expected hoarding of gold coins by the public. Paper money issues were designed and printed in 1914 and the Currency and Bank Notes Act dated 5th August of the same year empowered the Treasury to issue legal tender notes. Three different issues appeared with the signature of John Bradbury upon them - the secretary of the Treasury and the notes became known as the Bradbury first, second and third issues respectively.

These were circulated in denominations of 10 shillings and 1 pound. The 1 pound notes were placed into circulation on the 7th August 1914, 23rd October 1914 and 1st February 1917.

The 1 pound Bradbury second issue illustrated here was printed on one side only by Thomas de la Rue and remained legal tender until 1928 when the Bank of England began issuing her own £1 notes.

Irrespective of the pedantic care taken by bank note issuing authorities not to allow misprints, errors and similar notes do reach the public. Occasionally a few grotesque examples of paper errors make their way to the collectors. The interest of such issues is ten-fold when the authority is one of the infallible British institutions such as the Treasury. This is a misprint of the original John Bradbury third issue which was put into circulation in 1917.

Fiji was among the many governments who suffered from a critical shortage of paper money during the Second World War period. Futhermore, preoccupied by the possibilities of loss during transport from England, the Fijian government rather than have new notes printed in England, requested from the Reserve Bank of New Zealand her own circulating notes of the 1934 series to be overprinted for use on the Islands.

The overprint was executed by the printers of the original notes, The Commonwealth Bank of Australia.

Ten shilling notes, although prepared, were never issued. The £5 notes are exceedingly rare and the £1 rapidly becomming so. All of the notes were withdrawn by the 1950s.

From the days before Zionism came into being non-political religious groups settled in the Holy Land and formed self dependent communities known as "Kollel" Towards the beginning of this century many of these Kollels had established national identities depending on the origins of the members of the community.

The Austrian and Hungarian kollels, which had settled in Jerusalem were among the better known and, while still under Ottoman rule, members were sent to their mother countries in order to raise funds for the well-being of the communities in Jerusalem. These monies were administered by a centralized committee who used the sums in order to guarantee loans and currency certificates, as illustrated here, were distributed to the depositors to ensure repayment of the sums at a later date. Most of the notes were in the Napoleon gold denomination equivalent to 109 gurush (40 para = 1 gurush). They are all dated between 1913 and 1914 and the illustrated note is that of the Warsaw Kollel.

Italy began its penetration into the African continent in the last two decades of the 19th century with the nomination of a certain Capitano Filonardi as the counsul general of Zanzibar and as a result an Italian company was formed which issued paper money, dated 1893, payable to the bearer in the African State. The last of the Italian issues for Africa are the well known "Special Series for Italian East Africa" which were circulated in accordance with laws dated 1938 and 1939 respectively and for four denominations, the 50, 100, 500 and 1000 lira. The notes are, in fact, the ordinary Banca d'Italia issues overprinted for use in East Africa and with a further clause stating that circulation outside the occupied territories was forbidden.

Francisco "Pancho" Villa captured the city of Chihuahua on 8th September 1913 and, as temporary Govenor of the State Council, issued currencies in eleven denominations which became known as "Sabanas de Villa" - "Villa's bed-sheets" because of the size of the notes which increased in relation to their denominations!

These notes bear his full title as General Francisco Villa Govenor of the provisional state.

MOZAMBIQUE

The denomination of "10 Pounds Sterling in Gold" is bound to arouse curiosity in itself. Interest will be doubled when this applies to a Mozambique note, as is the case with the Banco de Beira issue of the 1st February 1921.

The Bank of Beira established in 1918 issued its first set of notes dated 15th September 1919 and the illustrated note is the only additional series issued before closure of the bank on 29th November 1929.

The notes were withdrawn and first overprinted by the Mozambique Company on that date. The Mozambique company issued its own notes in 1930 and when this latter company ceased to operate, all its own notes and those of the Banco de Beira were perforated with the word "cancelled".

18·1 x 10·8 cm

The denominations issued for the first series were the 1, 5, 10 and 20 pounds sterling and in the second series the one pound was omitted. All of the Banco de Beira notes are exceedingly rare.

In 1773 Captain James Cook of His Majesty King George III's Royal Navy became the first European to set foot on the South Sea Islands of the Pacific Ocean.

He is now honoured with his portrait on the Reserve Bank of New Zealand paper money issues and the added Hanna signature on the note - which designates the first issue of this series - adds to the rarity of this high denomination £50 note.

Several currencies of the world remain as the only relic of a past civilisation. The very colourful Ottoman Empire issues under Abdul Reshat V are classical examples.

The notes back by German and Austro-Hungarian funds were printed in these countries and put into circulation by the Turkish Ministry of Finance at the beginning of the First World War.

The notes were all redeemable in gold until well after the cessation of hostitlities and, consequently, the higher denominations, in particular, are extremely rare. The highest denomination ever issued of this series was for 50,000 Turkish Livres!

In spite of the numerous revolutions that have infested the Latin American sub continent, Peru remained conspicuously free of bloody military revolt, with one exception. On the 5th August 1921 Captain Guillermo Cervantes, in charge of the local garrison in Iquitos, rebelled against the Peruvian Government and proclaimed himself head of the whole of the city. He confiscated some £15,000 sterling in gold from the local "Bank of Peru in London" and issued his own notes. All of the money available to the inhabitants was confiscated and replaced with these "Cervanteros"

Four of the largest bank note printing companies of the world were responsible for the printing of the 10 soles issue of the Banco Central de Reserva del Peru since the Second World War. In addition to the World famous American Bank Note Company, Thomas de la Rue, Waterlow and Sons, German printers also printed the 1950's issues. Thes extremely colourful notes were replaced by the modern issues of Peru in 1968. 15·0 x 7·8 cm

The beautifully designed assygant notes of the city of Lemberg were issued in 1915 and issued by the local population who were mostly Polish.

Lemberg, the capital of Galicia was also the seat of parliament and by the time it surrendered to the Russian troops during the course of the Second World War the 100,000 refugees had been almost starved into submission. The denomination of 100 Koron is in Austrian currency.

Emergency has frequently lead to currency improvisation and the famous "shirt notes" of Upington are a classic example.

The shortage of paper and other economic pressures lead Major John Berbeck, of the 4th Scottish Rifles and in command of the Border Scouts during the Boer Wars, to have currency issued on cloth of all kinds.

The notes are written out fully by hand with a stamp stating "Border Scouts Upington" and stating as a heading that these were issued by the Paymaster of the Upington Border Scouts. They are signed by Berbeck and are now exceedingly rare.

The first ever issues of Spain were the Imperial Assignats of Joseph Napoleon dated 1813 and 1814 respectively and there were no further issues until 1837. In that year Carlos V, Pretender to the Spanish crown, issued his own notes under the heading of "Tesoro Real de Espana" in three different denominations of 50, 100 and 200 pesos "fuertes" - i.e. backed by gold. Each peso fuerte being equivalent to 20 "reales de vellon". The 200 pesos is the rarest of the three, all of which are very difficult to come by.

The Spanish Civil War of 1936-39 was a wide range of issues, many Partisan and several of the Bank of Spain in the republican issues. The note issues in Balbao were often over stamped by local banks confirming the availability of events to cover the issues.

In view of the low quality paper and the extensive handling of these notes, they rarely appear in the market in better than VF condition.

SUDAN

Gordon Pasha of Khartoum reached Sudan to supress the revolt of the fanatic "Mahdi" in January 1884. By this time he was already famous as General Charles "Chinese" Gordon and the world followed keenly the events in the Sudan.

The paper currencies he issued are among the world's rarities since many of these were personally autographed by him while others bore the facsimile of his signature. When the notes were issued they were accompanied by a personal announcement of Gordon stating that he would be personally responsible for the liquidation and action could be brought against him in individual capacity to recover the currency.

The Turkish Republic under the guidance of Kemal Ataturk was transformed in 1923 from a decadent Empire into a modern democracy. For the first time in Turkey's history the Latin alphabet was adopted and the old Turkish currency abolished. The modern notes portray either Ataturk or, as in this case, Ismet Inonu, Ataturk's right-hand man. The 100 Liras issued in 1942 is now extremely difficult to obtain particularly in mint condition.

"Please bear us in mind if you have any paper money for sale, whether individual items or whole collections."

Interest in the early paper money of America has been gaining momentum with the approach of the bi-centenial celebrations in 1976.
The colonial period is, of course, of equal interest to collectors of both Americana and British currencies and these over 200 year old items have fast disappeared from the market and increased in value in recent years.
Sheets of these notes are no longer easily available and the notes themselves in the shillings and pence denominations have become increasingly rare in EF condition or better.
The Rhode Island 1786 series from denominations of 6d to £3 were the last of the issues of these currencies in May of that year.

Giuseppe Garibaldi's instrumental interference in Uruguay's affairs led, late last century, to Uruguay's independence from her neighbouring countries and the establishment of the republic. Garibaldi is honoured on the bank notes of the Italian Bank of Uruguay which is of equal interest to both Italian and Uruguayan enthusiasts. Some early notes such as this one are at times discovered by quantities but experiences have shown that they are very quickly absorbed into the market and their true value soon emerges.

Although some collectors do not recognise specimens as true collectors' pieces, others see in these issues a value in that they are always identical to the issued note, and a limited and established number only make an appearance. Furthermore, they always come in perfect condition. The Equadorian early series are beautiful examples of American bank note company printing and the specimens are considerably scarcer than the issued notes.

The Union Bank of Scotland was founded in 1832 in Glasgow and effectively ended its independant activities upon amalgamation with the Bank of Scotland in 1954. Its note issues date back to the mid 19th century and the only examples known of many of these notes are to be found in museums.
Scottish bank notes of the last century, as a whole, are very rare items and early speciman notes, of which a very limited quantity were printed, have become collectors' items, avidly sought after.

"The final solution" advocated by Hitler and implemented by his henchman is recorded by several concentration camp issues. Among these are the issues used by SS Officers in the confines of the infamous Buchenwald camp.

With the approaching victory of the allies in 1945, the Germans attempted to burn all documents and among them, many of these notes, some which were recuperated with burnt edges.

The Second World War saw profuse issues of guerilla and partisan notes throughout Europe. Only a few of these were attractively designed, the rest normally being improvised printing efforts on cardboard.
The Civil Committee of National Liberation was a Greek partisan organisation headed by the comunist leader Markos which circulated the 5, 25 and 100 drachmai notes in the northern sector of the country during the German Occupation. The notes were issue dated 5th June 1944. The 100 drachmai note is recorded by Raymond Toy as only having been reputed to exist.

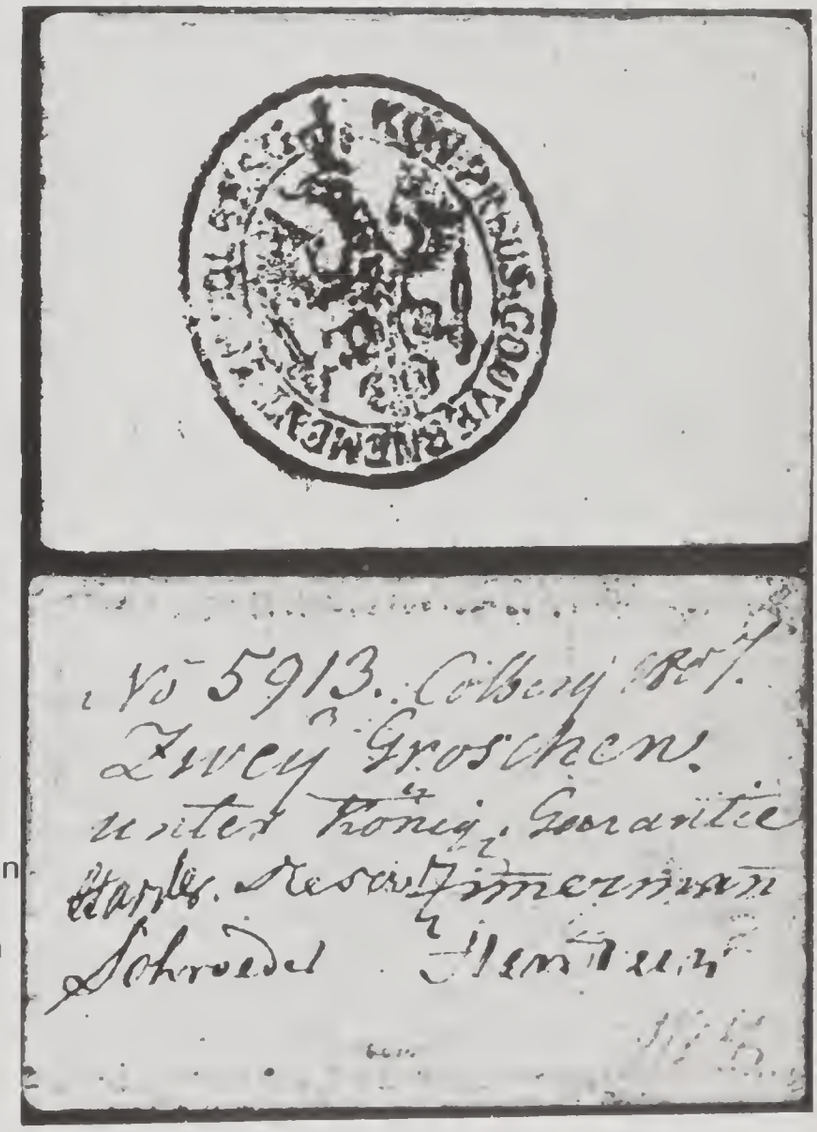
SPECIAL OFFERS



The Bavarian city of Colberg was founded in the 13th Century and suffered several sieges before Napoleon's unsuccessful efforts during a six month period in 1807.

To eleviate coinage shortage, cards in the "Groschen denominations" were printed on one side with an official seal and on the other side written out in hand giving them a serial number, date, denomination and a guarantee of close. These collectors' pieces are popular with a wide ranging variety of specialists.

"Kindly make use of the enclosed order form and envelope."

It would appear that the reason for there never being any proper paper money issues in the Kingdom of Napoli at the turn of the 18th Century, is the fact that all commercial activities were satisfactorily transacted by the use of fiduciary credit notes issued by the several Napolitan banks which effectively replaced currency.

The banks themselves were mostly formed in the 16th Century and issued their notes prior to the seven leading ones being placed under state administration in 1794.

They are all issued in Napoli and in the Ducat denomination.

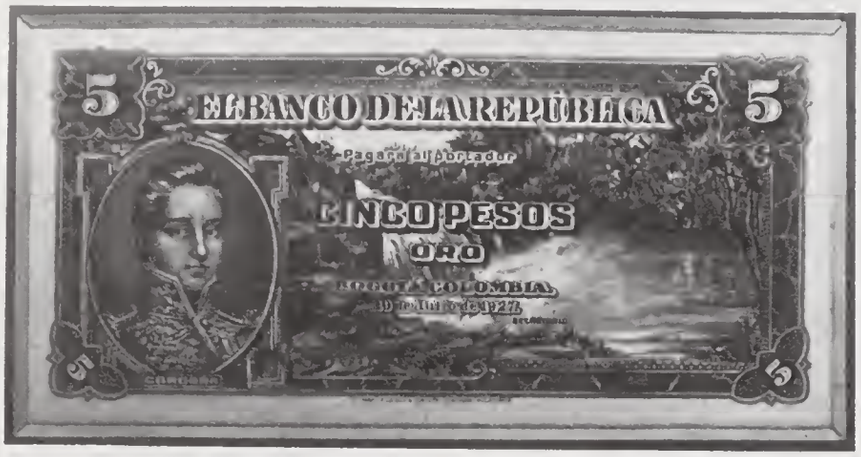
A complete set of the American Bank Note Company vignettes of the personalities appearing on the Banco de la Republica series of notes is a rare collectors' item. The vignettes are identical to the portraits on the bank notes and famous among them is Simon Bolivar, the young Venezuelan and father of the Latin American sub-continent.

Bolivar was, of course, instrumental in defeating the Spaniards in 1813 and subsequently in the declaration of Gran Colombia on the 17th December 1819 a week after the famous battle of Boyaca.

For the set of 7 vignettes together with the 7 specimens of the notes on which the portraits appear—£750—$1800

ARTIST DRAWING



The American Bank Note Company is the most famous of the printing entities, dating back to 1795 when it was founded by Robert Scott.

"ABNC designs" are a thematic subject matter to many collectors. Proofs and specimens of the American Bank Note Company make regular appearances in the market and they invariably quickly disappear into collectors' albums.

Original hand drawings for presentation to the banks are very scarce and obviously unique. The illustrated item is partially hand painted and very close to the design of the issued note. The piece is unique.
